HARRY HAYES.

Behind the grim walls of the state penitentiary, among the scores for whom those walls mark the beginning and the end of all things, there was one happy man last night. That man was Harry Hayes, the man who, for years, has been known as the Pelican Point murderer. For just at dusk last night the message came singing over the wires that the board of pardons had listened kindly to his petition for pardon and that it had acted favorably upon his case.

That message meant to him that he was free; free to go forth from the tiny cell which has been his abiding place for more than two years, free to return to his home, to his friends, to the loving wife who all through these years has never for a moment wavered in her faith in his innocence of the terrible crime with which he was charged. More than that, that message meant to him that now at last he might once more stand before the world without shame, an innocent man, from whom every shadow of a stigma or of a stain was wiped away. It meant that he was purged of the stain of murder, the cold-blooded murder of three innocent boys, for whose death the law had come almost within a hair's breadth of taking his own life. It wiped out all that record which has been charged against him on the pages of history, and left him to stand forth a guiltless man, a free man after many years.

By Unanimous Vote.

After listening all day to Judge Powers' recital of the evidence in the case, the evidence that went to show that not Hayes, but George H. Wright, was guilty of the atrocious Pelican Point murders, ten minutes sufficed for the board of pardons to reach a decision in the case and shortly after 5 o'clock the word came from the office where the board sat in executive session that a pardon had been granted to Hayes by unanimous vote of the entire board.

Five minutes later Warden Dow at the penitentiary, heard the news over the wire. The warden is a kind-hearted man and like most of those who have been brought in contact with Hayes, he has taken something of a liking to the man. When the news came Hayes was working in the main cell-house, where he acts somewhat in the capacity of janitor, and thence he was summoned to hear the good news.

Hayes Notified.

"The old man had been expecting it."

the Directors Begun.

(Special to The Herald.)

New York, May 6.—E. F. Cragin of Chicago, who has been the active spirit in organizing the new Trust Company of America, said today that the directors of the company are now being selected. In a short time, probably next week, the temporary treasurer, James Donald, vice president of the Hanover National bank, will send out a call for the $5,000,000 subscriptions which have been allotted, $2,500,000 for capital and $2,500,000 for surplus.The subscribers have been selected with great care, and include the leaders in financial, manufacturing, mining and merchandising, and other interests from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore. Alvah Trowbridge, vice president of the National Bank of North America, who is scheduled for a prominent part in the management of the new company, said today that the delay in launching the enterprise had all been due to the difficulty of making the allotments, as the stock and surplus had both been largely over-subscribed.Among the well known financiers to whom allotments have been made are Hon. Levi P. Morton of Morton, Bliss & Co., N. W. Harris of N. W. Harris & Co.; Joel Francis Freeman, H. H.
Rogers of the Standard Oil company; William Farber, the thread man; Senator Clark of Montana; H. C. Frick of the Carnegie Steel company; E. F.

trated by the number of the cities in tempt Made to Murder Him.

(Special to The Herald.)

Lander, Wyo., May 6.—Word was received at Lander last evening that Andrew Salmon had shot and instantly killed George Haas near what is known as the Home Station of the Rawlins & Lander stage line, on the Sweetwater.
The particulars of the killing are very meagre.It is known that had blood existed between the two men and Haas was confined for a short time in the county jail here on a charge sworn to by Salmon. Since that time Haas has sworn that he would kill Salmon on sight.Haas has been herding sheep for the last six months, but quit a few days and came to Lander. While here he seemed to be demented and heard on several occasions to say that he intended to clean out the Sweetwater country and then leave the country.On last Thursday morning he left town, going in the direction of the Sweetwater, having a Winchester strapped to his saddle. Salmon was notified that he was coming that way and to be on the lookout for him. Haas reached Salmon's home late yesterday afternoon and going to the house enquired for Salmon. He was told that Salmon was not at home, but was out hunting horses.Haas left the house and went in search of Salmon. He came up to him not far from the house and opened fire on him. He fired two shots, before Salmon was able to loosen his gun from the saddle. By the time Salmon got his gun they had both dismounted and lying down in the sagebrush began firing at each other. Several shots were exchanged before either hit the other.Salmon finally got a shot in on Haas that struck him in the forehead and killed him instantly.Word was immediately telegraphed to Lander notifying the coroner and sheriff. Coroner Schoo and County Attor-new Vidal left early this morning for the scene of the killing. It is believed from the news received here that the killing was in self-defense.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY.

Fate of a Cripple Creek Citizen In St. Louis.St. Louis, Mo., May 6.—Last Thursday night a well-dressed stranger was found in an unconscious condition in the cellar of the Manhattan hotel, with his skull fractured. His pockets were empty and there was nothing by which to identify him. It was thought he had fallen into the cellar while intoxicated.
He was taken to the city hospital, and has remained unconscious, with small chances of recovery.Today Mrs. W. O. Kelly, who conducts a boarding house at 200 Washington avenue, identified the man as a Mr.
Siegel, a wealthy citizen of Cripple Creek. She said he had spent a week at her boarding house and displayed much money and a number of mining stock certificates. He left here Thursday morning, saying he was going to New York to buy some mining machinery.How he came to be found in the hotel cellar is not explained, and the police are trying to solve the mystery.

Agent Myton's Views.The days of the notorious Duchesne "strip," the home of the bad man in Utah, and one of the last stands he has taken before his final extermination, may be numbered. Governor Wells has decided to act, and if his course should not prove sufficient, radical measures are very likely to be taken by Captain Gilfoyle, in charge of Fort Duchesne.There was a conference yesterday at the governor's office between the chief executive, Attorney General Bishop, Indian Inspector Graves and Indian Agent Myton. As a result, the governor will address a letter to the commissioners of Uintah county, urging them to take some action to rid the state of this haunt of the desperado.The law on the subject was read by the attorney general, and it was seen that if disorderly places are being conducted on the "strip," the county attorney should begin prosecution and close them up. If saloons are being conducted with gambling houses and houses of ill-repute attached, the county commissioners may refuse to grant licenses, and thus the chief attraction for soldiers and tough men will end.Such is the information which the governor will embody in his letter.
